

Judgment and Hypocrisy in Swinging

As you regular readers know by now, I usually write about fucking—my favorite topic! Last month we discussed the pros and cons of fucking machines—mostly pros. This month I'm going to wax a bit more philosophical on the topic of fucking. I am compelled to do so periodically by the lingering judgmental and hypocritical attitudes that still often pervade the various alternative lifestyle communities.

In this very same Xcitement issue, I am beginning a new series of articles called "Fet Scene" As with Swingers Corner, it will highlight events, happening, and participants in the local fetish scene, as well as feature some luscious photographs of local women. Information and local naked babes—the basis for everything I write!

Already, I sense the nose-snarling and tongue-wagging of some of you swingers and/or wannabe pervs. At the very mention of the word "fetish," many of you curl your noses in disgust. "I'm not into THAT kind of perverted shit," I hear you say. My response? "Shut the fuck up for a minute, and open your closed fucking minds!"

At their best, alternative lifestyle communities offer one simple thing: freedom of expression in a non-judgmental and accepting environment. In other words, the ability to be whom and what you are, without fear of ridicule and condemnation, so long as you don't disrespect or violate anyone else's right to do the same. Sounds pretty fucking good to me.

The problem is, despite this basic lifestyle tenet, there is way too much polarization and compartmentalization among swingers and kinksters alike. A case in point: Often I have heard remarks from my closest swinger friends to the following effect when watching a woman being spanked or flogged publicly. "That is weird. It's just wrong." My fetish/kinkster/BDSM friends often utter similar comments of disapproval when confronted with a swinger-couple frolicking naked at a party.

To my swinger friends, here is my response. Why is it that you find it "weird" that a woman's husband likes to give her a little spanking on the tush at the club, while your wife is over there in the group room with three dicks up her ass?"

To my closed-minded fetish friends, I offer a similar question. Why is it that you find it "disgusting" and "inappropriate" that a couple is making love over in the corner of the sofa, while your wife is hanging from the ceiling naked, chained and gagged, while being spun around, whipped, caned, flogged, pissed-on, and shocked with electric objects?"

I hope my point is obvious and emergent. All of us should take a step back and look at ourselves, and the things about us that may seem strange to other people, before we get on our sexual fucking high-horses and ride other perverts out of town! Within the swinging community alone there are full-swingers, swappers, soft-swingers, same-room sexers, exhibitionists, voyeurs, orgy-enthusiasts, gang-bangers, interracial swingers, three-some lovers, bisexual swingers, and poly-amorists, just to name a few varieties.
